

I had been in DC for about a year and a half before deciding to become a first time home buyer. From our first meeting, Rachel struck me as a dedicated professional who put a lot of herself into real estate. She guided me through a relatively easy condo shopping experience and was there for me to bounce ideas off of as I decided which unit I wanted, and how much to offer. She was particularly helpful when problems arose towards the end of the process. My closing date was changed about half of a dozen times due to various construction issues, and my mortgage company was playing games. I would often just call Rachel or send her an email with the questions and issues that I had, and let her take care of it. At the end of the day, I love my unit and am very happy with the deal that I got. If you're looking for a real estate agent, I would strongly recommend Rachel.
