

Before meeting Rachel Valentino, I was convinced that navigating the homebuying process was simply beyond me. But, thanks to her tireless efforts, her intimate knowledge of the local marketplace and her willingness to answer my many questions (even those that were clearly beyond what should reasonably be expected of a Real Estate Agent), I am now a very proud first-time homeowner. My new home is far better than I had any right to expect when I began this process, simply put, I could not I owe my homebuying success almost entirely to Rachel.